EDITORIAL NOTES.

A statistician who has just issued a report on crime in modern society, states that the more pious and straitlaced a community is the more wicked it is at heart, and he brings figures to prove it. Of course hypoerisy and secret vice always go together.

Five condemned murderers are now awaiting execution in the Tombs of this city. They are men, and will travel by the electric route. Eleven other men and four women are held to answer charges of murder, the evidence against them being very strong.

A. Frank Clark, Chief of Police of Frankfort. N. Y., writes to say that the Police GAZETTE has always been a great help to him in apprehending fugitives from justice. We have no doubt of it. There are thousands of other chiefs of police waiting for the opportunity to say the same thing.

Complaints of actors duped by managers come to us from time to time. If actors and actresses would not take the average manager's word as readily as they take the average hotel keeper's towels and writing paper there wouldn't be so many broken promises and so many walks home on rallroad tracks.

Two young women residing near St. Louis. Mo., were made widows recently in a hurry. A terrible domestic tragedy deprived them of their husbands immediately after the knot which joined them in holy wedlock was tied. They were stolen brides, and their angry pater familias treated their husbands just as he probably would have treated any thief. He shot

Peter All brought suit in Brooklyn against certain parties interested in the manufacture of air ships. Exhibitions were to be given at Coney Island, and Ali was engaged to keep the crowd together by the rendition of popular melodies on the cornet, while his employers availed themselves of the opportunity to get in a point now and again in favor of their hobby. They broke their contract with All, and now he resorts to law to recover the amount he claims to be legally due him. The suit came up in a Brooklyn court the other day. The judge pronounced the air ship company a wind jamming enterprise. They employed a wind jammer and wanted to pay him with wind. The whole scheme was conceived in wind, born in wind and was expected to be floated in wind. We should not be surprised if this windy affair should raise another cyclone in Brooklyn.

Mr. B. B. Morton, editor of the Pocahontas, Ark., Free Press. writes the publisher of the POLICE GAZETTE as follows, under date of

"In looking through some of my papers I found an old POLICE GAZETTE, the date of which is April 22, 1855, and thinking that you would probably like to have it, I send the same to you by registered mail. I have always been a great believer in the GAZETTE. But what a contrast there is in it now, under its present management, and twenty-three years ago!"

The copy of the GAZETTE alluded to is a fourpage sheet in newspaper form. The front page contains illustrations of the shooting of President Lincoln by John Wilkes Booth, and other events in connection with the foul crime which plunged this nation into grief. Though somewhat faded and tattered, it bears evidence of having been well taken care of, as it deserves to be, owing to the interest and importance of its contents. At that time it ranked high as an illustrated newspaper, but compared with the GAZETTE of to-day, it sinks into insignificance, To use a bit of slang, it is nowhere,

Some Orchestra Leaders --- Gilbert On Tights.

"I went to see Mrs. Potter as Cleopatra the other night with Florence Ashbrooke," said May Thomas to me last week. "I was deeply moved by Bellew's death scene. In fact, I confess I took out my handkerchief and had a good cry. I was crying away silently, opera-glass in hand, when Florence suddenly touched my arm. 'Look !' said she, I saw Mrs. Potter stretched out in an impossible attitude of grief, her feet turned inwards. 'Catch on to her toes!' added Flor-ence, irreverently. I did so; and had to laugh in spite of myself. It was too funny to see the big toes of Mrs. James Brown's two feet coquetting with each other, leaning toward each other in the most friendly manner. Mrs. Potter desn't man-age her legs any better than she does her toes. She can't walk in tights. The youngest burlesque girl looks more at ease in them. But, I suppose, we can't all do everything well. Some say I can't act."

Mr. Gilbert, partner of Sir Arthur Bullivan, doesn't seem to be in the best of hitmors nowadays. Some one asked him recently whether he would abolish tights.

"Of course I would, if they were merely worn to en-hance the attractions of the leg. A Rosalina may wear decent tights, but they are necessary for the part. But what I object to are the rows of ladies' tight-clothed legs, which are merely worn, in my opinion, to gratify the eyes of the young gentlemen in the stalls. In the old days when I wrote burlesques I was glad enough to get my pieces produced, but, having no authority, I had no choice in the matter. When I came into power I was told that burlesques without legs meant ruin. As I have told you, I consider our Bavoy pieces burlesques; was I right or wrong?"

John Wild came to town last week, and made his

Mr. John Wild has divided his play into three parts, "good morning," "good evening," "good gracious. If I add "good luck" I hope it will come true.

Our burlesque girls are not well up in ancient my thology. I have known of one who thought Cupid was a girl, and alluded to the young gentleman as such. I have known another who supposed Juno was a brother of Mars, and spore of the lady as such. All things considered, the girls are not so much to blame. The family relations of the gods of the Greeks and Romans were indeed a trifle mixed. Jupiter frequently used his latch key at the wrong door, and Mercury would often blow the light out in a strange lady's room. However that may be, Topsy Titter made a queer blunder in mythology last week. She happened to call on my friend Van Stunner, and immediately obseryed a certain picture on the wall of his elegant bachelor quarters. The picture in question was an old engraving-"The Toilet of Venus"-and represented the goddess of love and beauty in the act of taking a bath. She was almost as devoid of drapery charms almost as rich as those of a modern siren at a fashionable fancy ball. "Oh, Mr. Van," exclaimed Miss Topsy Titter, after looking at this picture for a moment with her big baby blue eyes, "oh, Mr. Van, is that the way they dress in Venice!'

Bob Fraser twirled his mustache a little, squinted his eyes a bit, raised his voice just a trifle, and gave me some souvenire of George L. Fox, the clown. "I was the first man to notice," said Bob, "that Fox was becoming inchie. I was playing with him at the time, taking the place of his brother in 'Humpty Dumpty in Every Clime, which I arranged. It was in New Bedford. Mass. In the bed room scene in 'Humpty Dumpty' Fox and were about to go to bed, when I noticed that Fox suddenly fell on his kness and began to pray. First I thought Fox was drunk but then I remembered he never drank a drop. I didn't think of the freak any more until next evening. Fox asked me to put on my evening dress suit as he wished me to go to an entertainment with him. When I came down from my bed room I found that it was raining very hard. I looked out of the window. A pitiable sight did I see. There, in the middle of the street, in the pelting rain, in his dress suit but without hat or coat stood the great white face pautomime clown, I ran out and begged Fox to come in. He haughtily refused, but dragged me into a drug store near by where he bought twenty dollars worth of tooth brushes and booth powder, although he had only three teeth in his mouth. I countermanded the order but Fox would have the things, and went home with them. Fox had spells of aberration but didn't die for a year or s after therivat attack."

To change the subject rather abruptly, Jimmy Richmond, of Richmond and Gilroy, has been indulging in poetry lately, and here is some of it:

> Here lies a Bong and Dalice Man For the times he was too slow; He was "fired" in Kansas City And canceled at St. Joe; He played the museum circuits

Billy Scanlan, who appeared in "Myles Aroon" at the Fourteenth Street Theatre last week, is a sympathetic actor, but he has little presence and less voice. He writes his own songs, they tell us, but he sings them indifferently. The women and children love him, however, and he evidently loves children. The swing scene catches the fancy of the iouse immensely. In this play Scanlau takes the part of an Irish lad, wrongfully accused of theft

She had on a tailor-made coat and a togue. Her dresses are always made puffy, so as to fill out her slight, girlish figure. Miss Russell lives iti the Chelses and receives one afternoon a week. Her flat is simply and tastefully furnished. On the first night of "Elaine" a woman friend of hers, a painter, came into her dressing room between the acts and complimented her on her dresses. "What a beautiful dress you wear in the second act." Not a word about her acting. Miss Russell said nothing for some minutes. Then she remarked: "O, I went to the Academy of Design last week. I saw your picture there. What a beautiful frame you put it in!" The friend who had

Her declamation was studied, but effective. In the banquet scene she was listless, weak, but in often been distracted |the wretched musisome of the orchestra leaders of metropolitan theatres provide their hearers. Their selections are generally in the worst taste. One wielder of the baton, dash of "Barbe Blen during the intermission of a tracedy. Another gives you the funeral sounds of the "Prophet" plump in the middle of a comedy. When you feel like meditating you are confounded by a dance tune. When you feel jolly your good humor is spoilt by a dirge.

Henry Puerner, at the Lyceum, is a sinner in some of these respects. Neither his musical selections nor the renditions of them suit the character of the house. Frank Howson, of the Madison Square, is another brehestra leader who doesn't seem to know his business: At least he doesn't adapt his work to the femned tastes of his andiences. Dave Braham, at Harrigan's, has one of the best orchestras for his catchy style of music in town. You whistle his tunes before you're half way out of the

Last, but by no means least, comes Ernest Neyer, of the Broadway Theatre. He has one of the most artistic and well-drilled orchestras in the city. Never, in looks, is the image of McCaul. They might play the Two Bromios and not be known apart. Orchestra leaders get from forty to sixty a week. Most of them give lessons in the day time. The average musician of a first-rate theatre gets from twenty-five to thirty-five a week. Orchestra leaders generally change their programmes every week and drink from six to sixteen glasses of beer every night.

I ran across Alfred Trumble on Broadway the other

He was humming a ditty something like this in a minor key!

"He playeth best who loveth best All music gay and grand, But give the man two dee's ears Who Wagner's strains can stand."

Since Trumble is now known as the editor of the new paper, Lies, I really don't know whether I can take him at his word, whether these lines express his real opinion.

There is a grain of truth in what he says, however. Selina Dolaro is dead. The whileom gay impersona-

Curiosity brought a lot of people together. Frank Wilson. Lillian Russell. Marshall Wilder, Frederici, Teddy Solomon appeared. Dolaro was nothing if not eccentric. She liked noto riety. I interviewed her once. She was broken in health then: a little woman in a red shawl, a wooten skirt; unkempt hair; a nose swollen from a cold an a husky voice: "Say snything about me," she said to me; "I don't care." As I looked at her, sutting there shivering and sniffling. I could not but fifth of day when she was young and pretty and captured the

And he rang for a hansom.

'Where are you going. Baggs?" demanded Faggs. "McGlory's ball," returned Baggs, sententiously.

"By Jove!" cried Faggs. "Take a fellow with you." In an hour more the news had spread, and half the Lowcuss Ciub was on its way to the East Side to shake its shins at Billy McGlory's ball.

There are balls that are held in tumblers, and balls that are held in halts. Generally, indeed, they go to-gether, and Billy McGlory's great annual festival to Terpsichore at Armory Hall was no exception to the "Hamlet," with Hamlet left out, would be a pretty dull play, and Hester street without Billy McGlory and Armory Hall would not be as much of a street as it is. But Billy and his hall are in the old place yet, and Hester street has not yet become a graveyard.

The great McGlory ball was opened with a hurrah and closed with a revolver. Between these periods Mr. McGlory's Four Hundred danced and enjoyed itself till the foundations of the house began to settle and the cellar was emptied so dry that a consumptive cock-roach could not have got a headache on the leavings. While they were absorbing the sparkling and invigorating fluid at the refreshment counter, a pretty, demure little blonde hailed Mr. McGlory at the door.

Faggs concluded to forgive his festive valet this once, and ordered up the beef tea for the crowd. When Byles helped his master into a coach at 4 A. M. he had a handkerchief tied over his head and a Chrystie street fairy with pink tights had captured Mr. McGlory's prize and what was left of the hat.

The midnight hour had sounded when a dark cloud for a moment hovered over the festive scene.

It was the arrival of the Thompson street delegation for the cake-walk. The delegation was in its best clothes, and had its wool oiled and its razors freshly

But the tender and gentle harmony of the great McGlory. ball was not disturbed by any of the horrors of Ethiopian carnage. Only the dull thud of an occasional reveller made disorderly by copious draughts of cider or weiss beer, as the vigilant and muscular bomcer tossed him down the stairs, varied the peaceful palpitation of dancing feet on the waxed floor, and the dulcet melody of the band: at least until the blush of dawn began to redden the cheeks of the coy and modest East.

Then a small man, whose hundred pounds of humanity were lost in the ample folds of a ferocious cowboy me, jumped into the middle of the dancing

There were some persons who averred that Mr. Mc-Glory had employed this excitable individual as an addition to the general entertainment, but this is no doubt a base slander. If Mr. McGlory had wanted a cowboy at his ball he would have got one with the hide, hoofs and horns on, complete.

There is nothing half way about the gait Mr. Mc-Giory, of Armory Hall, travels, except the half-way houses where he opens wine when he goes out for a brush with Bonner and Frank Work on the road: for though Mr. McGlory, out of regard for the welfare of the friends whom he is fond of having in to dance and sport with him of an evening, serves them only with temperance drinks, he is not averse to a glass of the sparkler himself when he is away from home.

"Come again, gents," said our host, as the deputation from the Lowense Club bade him good morn-

The deputation promised it would, and at the next annual celebration at Armory Hall it will turn out in force, if it has got over the effects of the McGlory brand of champagne cider by that time.

By the way, I haven't seen Jaggs since that morning we parted in Hester street but I hear that his doctor says he thinks he can pull him through. Dolly is still under the weather, and Faggs has been acting as his own valet, for Byles has eloped with the Chrystie street fairy in the pink tights for parts unknown.

Talking about balls, that must have been a queen one they had in a Montana mining camp last week. It was given to celebrate the opening of a new saloon and gambling house, and the whole town was invited.

The invitations stated that it was to be a fancy dress affair, and that all the ladies were to come in male attire and all the men dressed as women. They came.

Bearded prospectors in petticoals danced with buxom housewives in breeches, and the sentimental tenderfoot aped the manners of a young girl, while the pretty girls of the camp did their best to do justice to their

Going to a ball has led to a separation in the family of Moses Atchinson, of Cincinnati, that is interesting that gentleman's special circle.

"Has he?" sneered the visitor. "Well, I guess he's through by this time, for my husband saw him at Hassenpfeffer's Hall an hour ago dancing with a blonde girl from Over the Rhine."

Mrs. Atchinson concluded that she would like to view this interesting spectacle herself, and sure enough she found the fickle Moses in a hired dress suit, thumping the floor in a Highland Fling with a bleached blonde with a small nose and freckles.

The bleached blonde will not go to any more balls for several days yet, and Moses, who jumped out of a window to get away from his irate Mary, will spend the rest of the winter in the hospital.

Moral-Always take your wife to balls with you and then you will not get into trouble

One of the comic papers recently got off a joke about the strong man in a dime museum not being able to do his feats of strength because the performing goat had eaten up all the paper cannon balls. The performing goat appears to be of more use in real life than to eat up paper cannon balls, however.

A Chicago dime museum performer, who did an act with a goat, kept this sagacious animal in a room adjoining the one in which she, her husband and their little baby slept. The other night while she and her husband were swigging beer after the performance at convenient creek where the Gamberian beverage flowed in purling floods a fire broke out in their house. The goat had learned a trick of opening doors, and when the smoke began to thicken he got into his mistress' room, dragged the baby off the bed with his teeth, opened the room door and was pulling the child along the burning hall when the opportune arrival of the firemen rescued both goat and baby.

The owners of the rescuer and rescued arrived to find only the ashes of their home and the intelligent brute and the fortunate object of its solicitude being cared for by a good-hearted neighbor. If that goat has not been presented with a medal it surely ought to be.

Speaking of balls, there is-or, more properly speaking, was—a young Brooklynite who got an overdose of them last week. He made a wager that he could drink two quarts of champagne in a given time and he did it, but he will not drink any more wine or anything else.

The brand of champagne which provided him with a funeral is not stated by the newspaper reports of the affair. There are some wines, however, that might be onfidently guaranteed to finish an average man upon the first pint.

In common justice there ought to be a burial certificate and an order on an undertaker with every bottle. New York is the greatest champagne city in the world. There is more champagne—or what is so called swilled here in six months than in London in a year. The wonder is not that a man does drop dead of it, but that they don't drop dead all the while. A guest at Delmonico's the other night got off easier than the Brooklyn victim of the fatal fizz. He, too, dropped from his chair to the floor, but when he was picked up he was not dead—only dead drunk.

There was no doubt many an impecunious dude at Del's that night who would have liked to have had half HI FLYER.

A despatch from St. Paul, Minn., under date of Jan. 17, says: Society was shocked beyond expression this morning by the announcement that S. S. Eaton, Jr., and Mrs. Irene Hume, two of the most prominent roung people in the city, had been fined in the Municipal Court for disorderly conduct. They were arraigned in the same court in the afternoon on the charge of criminal intimacy. The complaint was sworn out by Robert Hume, the husband of the woman. Mr. Hume is the superintendant of the Northern Pacific Express Company, and Eaton is in the real estate and insurance business with his father in the German-American Bank building. Hume has suspected his wife of infidelity for a month, and has had a detective from Chicago and several police officers watching her. Last night Officer Godfrey was set to watch the house, and at half-past eight young Eaton and Mrs. Hume were seen to enter. The officer informed the Chicago detective, and they gained admission to the Eaton mansion through the connivance of servants. At a few minutes after twelve they appeared at the door of the sleeping apartment of young Eaton, and in a loud voice demanded to know who his companion was. The rays of a dark lantern were thrown into the room and the guilty pair were caught en deshabille. Mr. Hume will file a suit for a divorce.

The audience at the Standard Theatre. Cincinnati, O., were treated to a Western scene on Tuesday night that was very exciting and decidedly more realistic than the programme announced.

It was in the act of the melodrama where Capt. Jack Crawford, the scout, and Running Deer, a chief of the Comanche tribe, fight a duel.

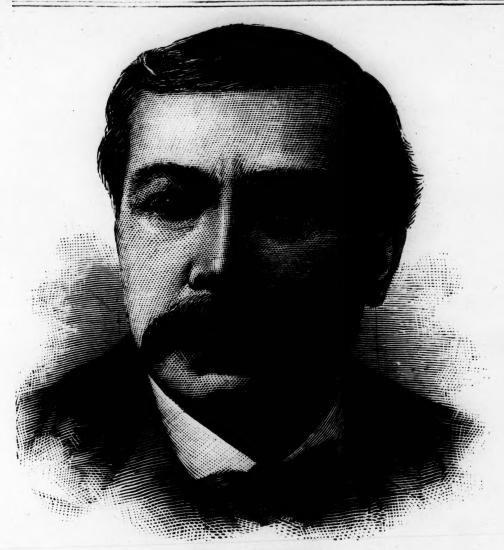

According to the play the scout should have taken the knife from the redskin, but the latter had, during the day, imbibed too freely of Cincinnati fire water and did not propose to be cowered by a pale face, and fought to kill.

It was a desperate and hard-fought battle, with long and sharp knives.

The struggle lasted several minutes before the scout got the best of the Comanche.

MARTIAL LAW.

The Alarming Operations of a Mountain Feud in Kentucky.

FACTIONS UNDER ARMS.

State Troops Brought in Requisition to Enforce Civil Justice.

THE RINGLEADERS STILL AT LARGE.

A portion of the State of Kentucky is now under semi-martial law-that is, the courts are powerless to enforce order, and the military has been brought into requisition. The latest fend in Kentucky has caused Governor Buckner to order out a detail of militia to quell the troubles until the ringleaders shall have been tried. The detail was made up from the Louisville Legion, and after four days' march over the mountainous region of Eastern Kentucky reached the scene of the feud-Hazard. Perry county-last Thursday.

Perry county is situated near the West Virginia line. Its county seat, Hazard, is further from a railroad than any other town in the State. To reach it the military had to leave the Knoxville branch of the Louisville and Nashville Railroad at a station named Woodbine, a point ninety-five miles distant from Hazard, and be transported the remainder of the way in rough road wagons. It required fifteen of these to take the thirty men and their officers.

The road to Hazard is inexpressibly wild and dreary. There are no turnpikes in this section, and the only attempt to improve the dirt roads is by "corduroys"that is, covering the road with logs laid crosswise.

KILLED FROM AMBUSH.

Travel over the cordurous is about the roughest jolting that can be imagined, and it is exceedingly slow. Bad as it is, it is better, however, than the dirt roads, which are smooth in spots and muddy and rough in others to a remarkable degree. The wagons with their complement of militia toiled slowly along the rugged roads, going up one hill and down another, as the saying is, and the first day making but fourteen miles and being obliged to camp out at night. The next day an early start was made, and the road being a little better, some twenty-five miles were made.

It was the first time that the militia had ever set foot in this region. Their coming was not relished by the simple mountain people, who regard their presence as an insult to their character as law abiding citizens. No matter how many feuds may have raged, for years so long that the number of victims is forgotten, the average mountain citizen protests against the insinuation that the law is not supreme in his section and resents the interference of strangers. He wants to settle his

At points along the road crowds of mountaineers were collected to view the bluecoats. At Manchester, the county seat of Clay, the little village was crowded, and the militia defail was coldly but curiously inspected by hundreds of people who had never seen a nniform before. They were very civil, however, and had nothing to say except when addressed.

A short distance from Manchester the militia were met by a biz man with a slouch hat and full grey beard, dressed in "store clothes" and presenting a traveled appearance compared with the people who had just been left. He was Judge Lilly, the Circuit Judge of that district, whose request had secured the attendance of the detail of militia. The Judge appeared very glad to see the soldiers and warmly greeted them, though saying he expected no trouble. He drove away in his "buckboard" cart after a few moments that being the only vehicle aside from a farm wagon which can stand the rough mountain roads.

The last day was the worst of all. The camp was broken early in the morning, and travel was begun at six o'clock over what proved to be the roughest road of the journey. Rocks and bowlders, precipitous chasms, gulches and high trees were in order. Now the wagons were in the valleys, with the rocks towering over them; now on the mountains looking almost directly down into the valleys About ten o'clock in the morning they reached a bend in the creek, and there, where the thicket in the over-hanging mountainside was the densest, in a little knoll between the road and the creek. were two hickory stakes driven deep into the ground. They marked the scene of the death of Joe Eversole and Martin Combs who were ambushed and shot last spring. They were with a party among which was the deputy sheriff of the county, but had lagged behind, and the first their comrades knew of the tragedy was when the shots were heard, and a few minutes later Eversole's horse dashed up to them with his saddle spattered with his rider's blood and brains. Retracing their steps the party found the two bodies at this bend in the creek. It is said that twenty-five men have been killed from ambush and in duels at this one spot.

After this place was passed the remainder of the road lay for the most part over Hazard Mountain, and was so rough that the young soldiers had to get out and walk nearly all the way. At one place the road was only six feet wide. A sheer precipice of three hundred feet vawned below on the right side and huge bowlders tilted the wagons up so high on the left that the wheels had to be locked and the sides of the vehicle next the mountain held down till the dangerous place was supposed, by the Eversole faction, as it is alleged that he was concerned with French in the killing of Eversole. Morgan was a brother-in-law of Eversole though he sided with French in the faction frays.

I am informed that the beginning of the French-Eversole feud dates back some twenty years. It took a fresh start in 1878, when a political trouble over the August election-in Kentucky the elections for State officers take place the first Monday in August—caused an affray between the members of the Eversole and Vermillion families. After some bloodshed this quarrel was compromised until it was revived by Joe French, who is a member of the old Vermillion faction. Since 1996 it has caused the death of four men directly connected with the feud, and several others passed. In a short while the town of Hazard was reached.

The little mountain village, about whose turbulent inhabitants and neighbors so much has been written of late years, was filled with mountaineers, who crowded the highlands and watched the troops ford the North Fork of the Kentucky River, upon which the town is situated. They greeted the soldiers cordially, and a big crowd soon surrounded a gatling gun, which had been transported in lieu of artillery.

Hazard is a considerable disappointment with regard to size, though beautifully and picturesquely situated. There are only about tenhouses in the village, besides a log jail and a brick court house with a white cupola. The town is situated in the bowl of a crescent formed by the river, on the opposite side of which rise high ocky mountains, which stretch as far as the eye can see. Back of the town is another high mountain, and the troops are camped near the village graveyard, a neglected-looking spot, with a few tombstones of plain lime or sand stone. A plank fence surrounds the lot, but it has been broken down. Over a few of the graves little pens of fence rails have been built, others are almost unmarked, a few have boards on which are rudely carved initials, and all are overgrown with weeds and briers,

The feud which has forced Gov. Buckner to order out the militia to support the arm of the law had its origin many years ago. It assumed its most bloody phase some three years ago. It was finally set-tled for a time by the sale of the store of J. C. Eversore, of Hazard, to J. C. French, of Letcher. At this time French and Eversole, who have all the time been the leaders of the factions, had each from thirty to forty men nuder arms, and Hazard was in a state of siege. Pickets were put out upon the roads, and it was dangerous for a stranger to make his appearance in that part of the country if there was anything suspicious about his makenp and he was not able to quickly estab lish a non-partisan identity. The retainers of each faction were supplied with the latest and best patterns of guns and revolvers. The deadly bowie knife, strange to say, never forms a part of the mountaineer armament. All their fighting is done at long range. and most of the killings are from ambush, though these bushwhackers are by no means destitute of

When the sale of Eversole's store was made to French the former went to Kausas, where he remained until a few months ago. Some defect in the agreement of sale furnished him a loophole, and he return of his store.

French, of course, refused, and hostilities betwee the principals were resumed. Eversole and Martin Combs, with four companions, were on the road to | prevent any possible bloodshed. There was no trouble who had been dragged into it by family influence and other causes.

The first man to lose his life was Shade Combs, who was assassinated from ambush on the banks of Troublesome Creek, the principal tributary of the North Fork of the Kentucky. He fell within a short distance of his own house. The second was the bushwhacking of Martin Combs and Joe Eversole on the 15th of last April. The last was the murder of Morgan, who was ambushed and slain only about half a mile

Judge Lilly began court on Wednesday of last week, but the trial of French was set for this week. At the ime the militia arrived there was no prisoner in the fail, which is a stout log cabin of two rooms, one room being used by the jailer's family, the other being given up to prisoners. French came in to stand his trial last Friday night, with a guard of thirty men under com mand of the Sheriff of Breathitt county. His appearance caused much excitement, but he claimed that the guards were necessary for his safety. As the Eversole faction followed close at hand with thirty armed men, it seems likely that French did not take too many pre cautions.

At the request of Judge Lilly the militia disarmed the mountaineers and took command of the town to seems no prospect of trouble until a conviction of French or some other prominent fighter is reached. In the meantime Hazard is under martial law, and the attention of the State has been turned entirely away from Pikeville and the Hatfield-McCoy fends.

The Fat Men's Club gave a ball at Cooper's Hall. Jersey City, N. J., on Wednesday evening. Everything went smoothly until 2 o'clock, when many of the guests went out to a restaurant to get supper because the proprietor taxed 75 cents for the meal when it was understood the charge would only be 50 cents.

When the dancers returned, or rather tried to return to the hall, they found the doors closed. They could not come in, so the doorkeeper said, and they were not even allowed to go for their wraps.

Protests did not avail. The doors were fastened and Mr. Newman would not have them opened. Those inside hastened to the rescue and demanded that the doors be opened at once. They were, but at the same time the gas was turned off. Confusion prevailed and the members protested against such action.

Mr. Newman said he did not agree to furnish lights, and the party adjourned to the club rooms on Newark avenue and finished their dance.

The conduct on the part of Mr. Newman made the fat men of Hudson county boil over with wrath. When-ever they meet it is the one topic, and the more they discuss the situation the more indignant they are.

WALTON DEFEATED.

Cal McCarthy Knocks Out Harry Walton in Five Rounds-His Opponent's Pluck.

The long-pending battle between Cal McCarthy, of New Jersey, and Harry Walton, of Philadeiphia, both feather-weights, was declied at a well-known resort-in New Jersey on The men fought according to revised Queen rules for $1,000. Only one hundred persons were present. Mc-Carthy is 21 years old, and last evening he fought his twenty-second battle. He is 5 feet 2½ inches tall, and he tipped the scales at 114 pounds. He has never been defeated. In 1886 and 1887 he won all medals in the 116 and 117 pounds competitions. Walton, when he entered the ring, weighed 110% pounds. His height is 5 feet 4, and he is 28 years old. Tom Ryan was his time-keeper. McCarthy's seconds were Tom Collins and Jack O'Meara. Walton's seconds were Paddy McBride and Jimmy McHale. There was heavy betting on the battle, and the sport-ing men of New York offered $100 to $90 on McCarthy. Takers were slow, but at $100 to $85 several Philadelphians risked their money. After that the odds dropped fintil $100 to $75 on Mc-Carthy found no response, the Philadelphia gentlemen being unwilling to risk more than $65. The following is an account of ROUND 1-The first round was a remarkably good exhibition of sparring. After a few seconds of prancing Walton began to lead. McCarthy avoided nearly all of the blows in his well-known skillful style. After the first half both men went in Walton scened two points on by drawing a drop of blood from McCarthy's nose, and scored by knocking his antagonist square-ly down. In a public hall this work would have called out trely down. In a public hall this work would have called out tremendous applause, but nothing more than excited whispers were heard. First blood was allowed to Walton, and the round, though very close, ended somewhat in Walton's favor.

2-McCarthy began to put in heavier work. Early in the round he knocked Walton to the floor, and immediately afterward landed a characteristic two handed blow on his adversary, one flat striking the throat and the other the left cheek. There one fist striking the throat and the other the left cheek. There was some clinching, but no delay in breaking apart. In all cases the clinching was due to Walton's inability to hit Mc-Carthy. He led the sparring almost continuously, but Mc-Carthy with wonderful agility dedged nearly every blow. On the other hand, Walten parried well. On one occasion he saved himself a frightful blow by catching McCarthy's fist on his fore arm. The blow raised an ugly red mark plat endured through out the fight.

3.—Up to this time the contest was apparently even, though the red on Walton's throat showed the effect of several of Mc Carthy's peculiar two-handed blows. Three of these were squarely landed on Walton's left cheek and neck, and though both men fought hard, and there was nothing apparently decisive, it was evident that, barring accidents, McCarthy would be a winner.

4—Inche beginning of this round Walton kept up his policy of eading, though his tactics could not be called foreing. Both McCarthy once on the cheek, causing a slight abrasion, and McCarthy countering as usual on his left cheek. Presently a tremendous double-hand-⁴ ed blow laid open Walton's already bruised face, and the blood flowed copiously from his left eye and ear and from a wound on the cheek. "Walton's right cheek was almost untouched. This was partly due to McCarthy's strategy and partly to Walton's possistence in dodging in one direction only. When the round in short-Walten was not a pleasant spectacle, but he was not groggy, though there is no telling what another minute might was plainly beaten when he began this round, though modely expected the end would come as suddenly as it did. He stood up with splendid nerve under double handers for about two minutes, splitting blood meanwhile. Then McCarthy hadded on his lift-cheek again just above the jaw. Walton stages and the control of the copes, caught at them, and saved an absolute fall; reeled to the ropes at his right-hand side, fell forward again, half rose, threw out his hands wildly, fell; back against the ropes on the next side, gained his feet, and then plunged head ough the ropes on the fourth side of the ring, and we up by falling to the floor. Ten seconds had expired from the time of the blow, and his seconds picked him up, a knocked out

It was several minutes before he could walk. Meantime Mc-Carthy, as fresh and active as a schoolboy, was passing a hat for the benefit of his foe. Another man was performing the same set, and a fair week's salary was accumulated before the crowd left the hall and hurried for a train. Waiton sobbed like a child atithe outcome. I His friends say, however, that his career as a fighterds not settled for good, but for the time being Walton did not seem to think that life was worth living.

McCarthy, the champion, is a graduate of the Scottish-Americans Athletic Club of Jersey City. He is not the only fighter of renown credited to this club Among its star graduates are Ginger McCormick and Jimmy Larkins, both undefeated as nals, and Pat Cahill, amateur middleweight champi Among his professional fights his best were the content Joe Flaherty, of Boston; Silvie Burns, of England; Engene

Harry Walton never fought to a finish before his battle with McCarthy. In four-round glove contests he has fought with Jimmy Hogan, Billy Peterson, Tommy Warren, Jack Farrell, of Jimmy Hogan, Billy Peterson, Tommy, Warren, Jack Farrell, of Harlen; Martin Dempsey, and Willie Haas, all clover boxers. All these were clear victories for Walton except those with Warren and Farrell which were declared draws.

SUBJECT OF ILLUSTRATION. This town, the county seat of Berkshire county, says a special despatch to the New York Sun, under date of Jan. 20, from Pittsfield, Mass., was stirred to the depths this morning by the revelation of the fact that within its borders and under the shadow almost of one of its finest churches is a full fledged opium joint. It is none of your low Chinese "hop" joints, but one fitted up with Oriental splendor, and conducted by a long-time devotee of the drug, it being no less a person than Gen. William Marvin Lutz, a famous and notorious character, formerly prominent in the Salvation Army. Some four weeks ago the General made known to an intimate friend that he was conducting an opium joint, and invited him to visit it. The invitation was accepted, and this led to the raid of the Twenty-five delicate-looking young men stood by the door of the Brooklyn Park Theatre last night. They all smoked cigarettes and chatted knowingly about the stage and chorus girls. They were, in fact, twenty-five pure-blooded dudes from New York, and. as per agreement, they were to dine with twenty-five of those fascinating beauties of the London Gaiety Company. The girls had all promised to revel in the champagne dinner, but the manager requested them not to do so.

Half the girls, or as near half twenty-five girls as you can get, promised not to, but the others wanted to dine. The good girls—they are all good, of course. but those who were better than the others-induced all but five to keep away from the dudes and the wine. The dinner was a big success. After the sumptuous lay-out was disposed of there was a dance, and the racket wound up by some of the girls giving an exhibition of their stage performances.

A sad and appalling story connects itself with the appearance yesterday in the Cook County Court of Insane Inquiry, at Chicago, Ill., of a poor unfortunate girl, Hattie Nathan. The court was asked to judge as to her sanity. She is still under the hallucination that she is pursued by pinery ruffians who want to drag her back to the awful den at Marinette, and even the sight of a trunk, which suggests travel, will send her into a paroxysm of terror, in which she will cry out "The hounds are coming! A slashing glove contest was decided at the Military Academy, West Point, N. Y., on Jan. 20: The affair, which was of a very sanguinary nature started on January 13th in the big mess room, known as Grant Hall. Cadet Captain George T. Langhorne, of Virginia, one of the leaders of the graduating class and a noted beau among the girls during last summer's hops, found on that day that after all the drawings had been made for the mess tables there were four cadets left over whom none of the table commandants seemed to desire as company. Among the young fellows not drawn was Cadet Charles B. Young, colored, of Ohlo. who was also left in the same predicaent at the drawing last September. Capt. Langhorne, as superintendent of the mess, in adjusting the matter transferred cadets of various classes to his own-the staff-table and asof the "left over" cadets to other tables. The colored Ohioan was sent to the table presided over by Cadet Lieutenant Morris K. Barroll, of Maryland, and he quietly took his seat at the one o'clock dinner that memorable Sunday. The presence of the colored boy has caused more or less troubled for the past five years, but heretofore all difficulty has been peaceably ad

The flery Southern nature of Barroll was instantly aroused when he caught sight of the negro cadet at his table, and he jumped to his feet and rushed across to the staff table and pro-

The service, in course, served to aggravate the disagreeable situation and both young men became very angry. Barroll complained that one of his chums had been feinloyed from his table to make room for the colored boy, which was the fact. Langhorne replied that Cadet Young was a classmate of Barroll's, and in any case he had the authority to assign the cadets to any table he chose. In the heat of the dispute some very angry words were spoken which are never heard in Sunday school

Southern blood is hot. During the next day at parade Barrol was astonished to hear his name read aloud from the big boo and a demerit was entered against him for ungentlemanly duct toward a fellow cadet. In the language of the barracks, he was "skinned," and he felt his disgrace keenly. Cade: Oa tain Langhorne had reported him and every one of the 300 soldier ooys knew it. It was really only a very small matter and a common incident in the daily routine of most of the boys in uniform, but to Barroll, who stood on the record as perfect for a year previous, this "skin" report was a serious matter, and he ground his lip between his teeth. This was a double insuit, for which he must have satisfaction without delay.

CAPT, LANGHORNE AND LIEUT, BARROLL FIGHT TO A DRAW.

That very night he sent his trusty triend, Cadet Charles B. Hagadorn, of New York, to demand an apology of Laughorne. Hagadorn, of New York, to demand an approgy of Langhorne. The latter replied that a Virginia gentleman never apologized as long as he was in the right, and then the challenge was duly delivered and as promptly accepted. If the chivalrous knight in grey cadet cloth and bell buttons could have only had their own way there would have been a frightful scene of hacking and mutilation with cavalry swords, but wiser counsel perhaps pre vailed, and it was agreed to have a duel with bare knuckles The entire post, except the military, was aroused over the prep-Hagadorn was to act as Barroll's ond, while Langhorne selected Cadet William W. Then the battle became fast and furious, and up to the thirteenth and the was some very hard hitting and four knockdowns.

During the next two rounds it was fearful slugging, and the boys stood up and took the punishment splendidly. Comments Regarding the Approaching Fight Between Kilrain and Sullivan.

JOHN L. UNDOUBTEDLY MEANS BUSINESS.

I learn through the thousands of exchanges that weekly pass beneath my notice that many of the sporting writers have their doubts about the great match between Jake Klirain and John L. Sullivan for $20,000 and the "Police Gazette" diamond belt which represents the championship of the world ever taking place.

I remember when John L. Sullivan was matched against Paddy Ryan for $7,000 and the championship the wise-acres claimed they would never meet in the ring, but they did. Prior to the great international fight between Jake Kilrain and Jem Smith for $10,000 the "know-alls" made the same false prophecy, and with the same prophetic institution they published that John L. Sullivan and Charley Mitchell would not enter the ring, and again their prophecies fell to the ground like snowfiakes before a spring time sun.

I know one of the contracting parties is certain he will enter the ring on July 8, and he will not, pay any attention to idle rumors, but live abstemiously and train thoroughly for the encounter, as he is eager for the fray and senguine of

I do not know what Sullivan's intentions are, but I should, on general principles, suppose that he is in earnest, for it appears to me that it is the only chance he will have to regails his old-time popularity by attempting to win back the championship, which he fairly lost by his failure to defend the title when it was in his keeping.

If any one doubts that the big match will take place it cannot be on the champion's account. So far, during his pugilistic career, he has never failed to be at his post when time wascalled, and he has always filled his engagements, even when he had to journey to France to do so. Sullivan, through sickness or something else, may make the great fistic sensation of the century a flasco, but Kilrain, I am sure, will not do so, nor will he place a straw in the way to prevent his meeting Sultivan.

The parties who are finding the sinews of war for pear to be willing to either win or lose $10,000 on the meeting between the two modern gigantic gladiators, and if this is the case, next July will witness Elirain and Sullivan face to face, toe to toe, in the arena battling for more money than was ever fought for since pugilism was first intro duced in the seventeenth century.

In these columns, on July 19, 1884, was published the following: "Salityan ides not want to meet every member of the prize ring division who challenges him, and who only dex the champion because they know there are thousa of dollars in gate money. There are plenty of pugilists, both among the middle and heavy-weight division, that would be ready to stand up and be knocked out by the champion provid ing Sullivan would agree to allow 30 or 40 per cent, of the gate receipts to go to his opponent. There are only two puglists that sporting men care about witnessing Sullivan meet. They are John Kilrain, of Boston, and Charley Mitchell."

Sullivan subsequently met Mitchell, and now he is

In the Baltimore "American" I find the following about Kilrain. It says: Kilrain is extremely careful of his good name, as any Baltimorean who knows him will attest. Certaincess; nor did he dissipate in any other way. His whole ambition seemed to be to make his family happy, for in his children all his hopes are centered. His love for his home is best illustrated in a remark he made to a New York Herald correspondent in London just after his fight with Smith.

What was uppermost in your mind while you were in the ring?" he was asked.

"The defeat of Smith," he replied. "and after that my wife, how grieved she would be over my defeat, and how happy if I

As to prize fighting, he has frequently told me that he disliked it, and that he would get out of it as soon as he could. This does not mean that he is a coward, for fear is unknown to him. estimate of Kilrain, John Boyle O'Rellly, author, poet, journalist and amateur sparrer, once said: "Kilrain is the greatest boxer in the world, but he is too gentle, too modest, too much of a gentleman to be a prize fighter." It seems to me that this little opinion fits him like a glove. Kilrain never sought note He is an extremely modest fellow, and, while he always liked to be accommodating. I have heard him repeatedly ask reporters not to publish too much about him, as the public might think he sought the interview himself. This does not mean that he lacks ver forgets a kindness. To illustrate his abhorrence of street or barroom fights, and tough doings of all kinds, he once severe ly lectured a young friend of his in this city for being 'concerned

"I never get mixed up in those affairs," he said, "and it is all would put up with almost any indignity before I would permit it to be said that I was a buily or a tough."

During his late visit to this city he was several times tendered boxes at the theatres, and with each acceptance he insisted on panions to have the best positions. Again, upon leaving Baltimore, about a month ago, he was toasted by a well-known

"Here's that you may knock out Sullivan in four rounds." Kilrain, in his modest way, after a little pause, said: "'t's my ambition to whip him, and I will do my best, but I will be satis-fied to kneek bim out in any round." There was no bluster

These little incidents are given merely to show what a great big manly heart he has got. When he returns to Baltin friends are going to give him the welcome he deserves.

Sullivan, I believe, claims he is growing stronger every day. He will not begin setive training for his fight with Kilrum until about the middle of May, as he don't believe in long ig. The leg which has been troubling the big fellow until a few days ago is now Dronounc d'almost às strong as ever. "My arm," said Sullivan. "is also as good as it ever was. You know I broke it on Cardiff's hard head, and hurt it again when I all right, and I apprehend no further trouble from it. Of course it is liable to accident in battle, but otherwise I wouldn't give any other right arm in the world. I shall be more careful in ziming my round-arm blows in the future; but then a man is instead of the knuckles, in a hot fight; that's how I first Touching on the question of the selection of a refsullivan said that the evils likely to grow out of the selec tion of a man months before the fight were enough to condemy at the ring side. The Omaha "Herald" says: "The colored pugilist Jackson, has challenged Kilrain, and the latter has accepted the invitation. Sullivan immediately jumps up and says he will not only not fight a 'nigger,' but will refuse to stand up with any white man who has done so. Between a square up-and-down prize fight, bare knuckles and the modern contests of jaw, with sparring at the and too blood drawn, we would much prefer the former. There was something to admire in the brawn of Heenan, and Sayers, and Jem Mace, and Morrissey, and men of that kidney. They didn't do much talking. They simply met and had it out then and there, with as few preliminaries as possible "

Jack Dempsey, the Nonpareil, made a home run on Jan. 21. He left his combination and came on to this city with Denny Costigan, his boxing partner, and he left on Jan. 23 to join his combination at Cleveland. Dempsey's tour has been a great success, and in every town and city he and Costigan have appeared he has met with tremenduous receptions.

In reference to McCaffrey's offer to meet Dempsey in the California Athletic Club, providing the club put up a purse of $5,000, Dempsey said he would accept, at five minutes' notice, to meet McCaffrey, but that he would require time to

It is my opinion that if the California Athletic Club should agree to make any fair proposition for a meeting between Dempsey and McCaffrey there would be more interest and ex-Club are now arranging. Dempsey is one of the planets in the puglilistic firmsment and a wonder at his weight, and the public and poses as a champion, and, barring accidents, he will probably keep to the fore until he retires from the ring.

By the way, Dempsey has said many harsh words about Mitchell, who recently left for England, and the latter also was not very choice in his remarks about Dempsey; but when courage becomes the mooted question. I think it is out of place, for both possess their share. Dempsey has nover proved by his many contests that he did not possess neither has Mitchell ever displayed the white feather. would credit the fact that Mitchell intended to fight John L. would credit the fact that alterior microtox or ng. Sullivan, but he did, and accomplished what no other man ever did. Mitchell can fight, and all the people that think he can't, if they put their opinion any long remove below par, may be if they put their opinion any long remove below par, may be sadly disappointed. Of course a damaged hand is a great draw-back. It is almost sufficient to make any champion withdraw for all time from the ring, but Mitchell hopes for its recovery, and says like should be so lucky he will then accommodate Dempsey or anybody else. In fact, I believe he says: "I'll fight Dempsey in the spring with skin tight gloves, 20 or 30 rounds, hand right or wrong." And I believe he will.

Now, I remember many champion fistic artists whose hands have been damaged, and with the injury they renounced ring encounters. One or two will do. Mike Donovan didn't meet George Rooke, after thousands had embarked on Lake Erie to see them fight, because of an injured hand. Billy Edwards was another who disliked bare knuckle work after one of his hands gave way in his battle with Tim Collins for the light weight championship, and game Mike Cleary has been far re moved from his former puglistic self since he split his "bunch of fives" on Sheriff's (the Prussian's) head. No, no! good hands are required, and perhaps it may be said good arms, too, in affairs of this kind; but perhaps Mitchell has courage enough to have a try at Dempsey, as he says he will, whatever the condition of his hand in the spring.

It would settle the question of superiority if Mitchell and Dempsey were to meet in the arena. A meeting between these famous pugilists would create a furor in all parts

I found the following in looking overa file of the POLICE GAZETTE, May 8, 1886:

Police Gazette, May 8, 1886:

"I think Jack Dempsey has got a better idea of standing a champion than many of those who have held championships in the past. Dempsey does not only prepare for a contest after a match is ratified, but he goes through a regular routine of athletic excreises which render him physically in condition to enter the ruped arena when a match is ratified if necessary. Dempsey daily walks, runs or engages in some athletic exercise, and by constant practice at various games he has not only reached the highest pinnacle in the puglished firmagent, but he has turned out to be an expert roller skytar, a fuir polo player and quite an oarsman. If one-halt the men who aspire to athletic farm- and expect to win championship contests, and hold that high distinction against all comers, should follow the middle-weight champion's modus operands they would be always nearly in condition to engage in any athletic contest, no matter whether it was a prize ring encounter or fost race, aquatic contest or a wrestling match."

I hit the nail on the head, for Dempsey has not yet

On Feb. S. I understand, Dominick McCaffrey is to meet Jack Fallon in a ten 2 minute-round glove contest at Hoboken for the gate receipts, and the winner is to be matched against Jack Ashton. In the meantime, McCaffrey is trying to induce the California Athletic Club to offer a purse of $5,000 for Dempsey and himself to battle for. Should the club decide to offer the purse. Dempsey will no doubt agree to meet Mc-

I see that George Le Blancke is not going to keep his light any longer under a hulf bushel or engage in any prise ring encounters unless his apposients are nearly up to cham-pionship form. He has taked a challenge to meet Johnny Reagan, the well-known welter weight, in the orthodox 34-fe ring for $1,000 a side or upward.

There is one thing noteworthy about Le Blanche, and that is he is never looking for cheap notoriety. When he says he will make a match or will enter the areas to battle for wealth or glory he generally carries out the contract.

What will come out of La Blanche's defi thousands who read these columns will anxiously wait to see. Reagan, the pugilist whom La Blanche is eager to meet, is one of the best men at his weight now in the ring. His long and desperat elt and the middle-weight championship of the world proved this beyond a doubt, but whether he will pick up the gauntlet La Blanche has thrown down, I am at present un

Reagan's ambition for some time past has been to journey to the Pacific slope to meet young Mitchell. Whether he will give up the proposed journey to pluck feathers neare home, a few weeks will decide. Should Reagan's backer, Billy Reed, decide to back him against La Blanche, there is not the sed meeting would create a great san least doubt that the proposation in fistic circles, and the result would be the m ate encounter ever witnessed in the arena, and both La Blanche

The Rev. Dr. William Ormiston, chaplain of the Grand National Curling Association, on Jan. 20, at Dr. Rossifar' church in this city, delivered a sermon to the curiers. The curiers listened attentively, and joined in the singing heartily several of them having been precentors in a land where the low of music is part of the nature of the Scottish people. Dr. Ormiston took his text from Luke, xii., 15-"A man's life consisteth not in the abundance of the things which he possesseth," and the sermon was an eloquent analysis of that sublime truth, comparing material and spiritual wealth both by contrast and resemblance "Br diligence, intelligence, frugs and thrift," said Dr. Ormiston, "a man may attair competence, if not affinence. So a man, by the use of the mean provided by God, may gather into himself the moral wealth of up treasures in heaven."

THE LATEST INNOVATION IN COLLEGE ATHLETICS.

SUBJECT OF ILLUSTRATION.

After weeks of patient waiting and ingentous planbing the new rowing tank was finished at Harvard College a few days ago, and made the scullers in college unusually happy. It has been one of the prime necessities of the athletic department of the university for years, but until recently a satisfactory site could not be agreed upon. Those who have boating matters in hand determined early in the season to con-struct some sort of an arrangement for practical rowing at any cost, even should it not serve their purposes for more than one year. After looking over all the buildings in the vicinity of the college, they finally settled on the basement of the old Hasty Pudding Club house, near Jarvis field. four weeks ago, and began work at once. The tank is not as capacious as was at first contemplated, but will answer very well for this winter and suggest to the boating men a good many points that will be serviceable in the erection of a per manent one a year or two hence. It is 47 feet long, 27 feet wide, and is the shape of a large mud turtle. The floor has been cemented and a water tight wall, about three feet high surrounds the pool. The semi-circular woodwork on both ends and a partition, half the length of the tank, on either side of the boat, midway between the centre and the sides, causes an elliptical flow that must be beneficial to the rowers, and produce a similar effect that an ordinary weak current would. It is evident from this that the crew will pull against a current, and, with a triangular perforation in the blade of the oars will get the same sort of swing, in rather an imperfect cramped way, that they would in river rowing. This will be a decided improvement over the chest weights and rowing-machines, the monotony of which was trying and in several instances discouraging to the men. 'The candidates for the crew are thoroughly satisfied with the tank, and will use it daily until spring, when they will resume their work on the

PROF. E. M. WORTH.

[WITH PORTRAIT.]

Prof. E. M. Worth, proprietor of Worth's Palace Museum in this city, is a nephew of that grand New York hero, Gen. Wm. J. Worth of Troy. He has visited all parts of the earth, and expended an immense amount of money in purchasing the choicest and most wonderful curiosities that could be found, embracing rare coins, historical relics, etc., sufficient in quantity and value to stock half a dozen museums.

His collection furnishes just what the moral and redigious portion of the community want-an unobjec tionable place of amusement, where every one can go and be highly entertained, instructed and satisfied. Mr. Worth was formerly the proprietor of a well-known resort for the amusement public on the Bowers. He has recently established a museum on East Fourteenth street, New York, where he has one of the largest and finest collections of curios in the world.

ADA REHAN.

[WITH PORTRAIT.]

Ada Rehan, the leading lady of Augustin Daly's Comedy Company, is known almost as well in Paris. London and Berlin as in New York, Boston. Chicago, Philadelphia and San Francisco. Her artistic work in "Needles and Plus," 'Country Girl," "A Night Off," "Taming of the Shrew," "Midsummer Night's Dream." "Love in Harness," "The Railroad of Love," "The Inconstant," and many other plays have made Miss Rehan's name a household word among lovers of refined comedy. We enhance our valuable collection of theatrical pictures by reproducing her features on another page of this issue.

BOB.

[WITH PORTRAIT.]

We present the readers of the Police GAZETTE in this issue with a portrait of Bob, the famous fighting dog of Baltimore, Md., whose owner, The. Seeger, of 436 Frederick avenue, that city, wants to match him against any dog in America. Bob's fighting weight is 32 pounds. He has won three battles, the only battles he encountered, and killed his antagonist in them all. He has also been in several rat pits. The quickest time he has made in 10-foot pit was 17 rats in 37 sec-onds.

MRS. MARY GARRETT.

[WITH PORTRAIT.]

Governor Forsker, of Ohio, has commuted the sen-tence of Mrs. Mary Garrett, who was to have been hanged next Thursday at Columbus, to life imprisonment.

Mrs. Garrett was convicted of murdering her two step-daughters. On Friday the Board of Pardons recommended the action which Governor Foraker took subsequently. Since she was imprisoned Mrs. Garrett has become the mother of a boy, who is five months
